This colorful porcelain bowl dates to the mid-19th century and was originally used as a serving dish for ritual offerings, placed before a home altar and piled high with fruit, baked goods, and other foods. The cartouche-shaped dish features tall sides, a short footed base, and a bright turquoise-blue interior glaze. In reference to a popular Ming-dynasty drama, the exterior is painted with scene of mythical immortal beings gathered to celebrate the birthday of the Three Star Gods. Continued...

FOOTED OFFERING BOWL WITH GATHERING OF IMMORTALS

Known as the Sānxīng (三星), the Three Star Gods of health, wealth, and longevity are folk deities that embody prominent star constellations and offer blessings for a good life. The remaining figures are the Eight Immortals of Taoism, gathered in celebration of the Sānxīng around a stone table. Said to have attained immortality through their studies of the natural world, each of the Eight Immortals represents a different condition in life and together they impart a blessing of prosperity and longevity. Decorated in a pastel palette against a field of crisp white, this footed offering dish makes for a fantastic centerpiece or serving bowl.
