W: 49.0" D: 23.0" H: 0.25"

This unusually-shaped carpet is known as a "makden" and was originally used by a nomadic traveler as an artful covering for his horse. Placed between the saddle and the horse, the makden cushioned the rigid saddle and kept the horse warm in cold climates. Most under-saddle carpets include two to four holes near the center, through which the girth straps of the saddle were threaded.

TIBETAN SADDLE CARPET WITH SCHOLARS' OBJECTS

The field is enclosed by a simple meander and a main border patterned with auspicious symbols and scholars' objects, including scrolls, flutes, and offering fruits. Hand-knotted in a palette of orange, red, and blue, the small carpet continues to enrich its surroundings with bright color and rich texture.
