This delicate birdcage was once home to the tiny pet bird of a Qing-dynasty aristocrat. Dated to the late 19th century, the round cage has a cylindrical form carefully assembled from thin bamboo rods finished with black lacquer. Several accessories decorate the cage, including five porcelain water cups and thin perch carved of bone in the form of a dragon. The cage is further decorated with a petite bamboo cricket cage and protective charms of carved ivory, jade, and agate. Continued...
